

— FROM THE FLOOR UP · PLAYBOOK 01

The Reactivation Campaign Playbook

A 3-touch sequence to bring past clients back, plug-and-play for any service-based business.

AUTHOR

Daris Wilson

SITE

fromthefloorup.co

EDITION

2026

WHY THIS WORKS

Most past clients didn't leave because they were unhappy.

They drifted, life got busy, the holidays hit, a kid got sick, work shifted, and your service quietly fell off their calendar.

They still like you, they still need what you do, and they're waiting for a reason to come back. This sequence gives them that reason, with a deadline that forces a decision.

In my fitness business in Jersey City, this exact campaign accounted for 20 to 30 percent of our early-bird registrations every time we ran a new challenge, and most of those reactivated clients converted into long-term members because the rapport was already there. The cost to send a few hundred letters was small, and the close rate was the highest of any acquisition channel we ran.

This playbook gives you all three touches with placeholders you can swap in.

Six steps before you send a single letter.

1. List every past client from the last 24 to 36 months who is no longer active with you. If you're running a CRM, use it to build a "past clients, last active 24 to 36 months ago" report and export it to a spreadsheet so you have a clean working list to run the campaign from.
2. Pull mailing address, email, and phone number for every name on the list.
3. Pick one flagship offer to use as the reactivation incentive, ideally something with a clear start date so the deadline feels real.
4. Set your response deadline 14 to 21 days from the day the letter goes in the mail.
5. Send the snail mail first, the email 4 days later, and have your team or you make the phone calls the day after the email goes out.
6. Track every commitment in a simple sheet so your team can close the easy yeses while you spend your time on the warmer conversations.

The CTA in the letter and email is to get a commitment, not a sale. A commitment means they've raised their hand and said yes in principle, and from there your job is just to confirm payment and start date.

Fill these in before you send.

PLACEHOLDER	WHAT GOES HERE
{FirstName}	Client's first name
{YourName}	Your name or the name of the owner
{BusinessName}	Your business name
{OfferName}	The name of the program, package, or service you're using as the bribe
{OfferOutcome}	The clear result the offer delivers (e.g., "drop 1-2 sizes in 6 weeks", "stage 3 properties in 30 days", "rebuild your back-office in 90 days")
{OfferIncludes}	The bullet list of what's inside the offer
{RegularPrice}	What the offer normally costs
{ReactivationPrice}	The discounted price for past clients
{DiscountPercent}	The percentage off (e.g., 50%)
{ResponseDeadline}	The date they need to respond by
{ProgramStartDate}	The date the offer starts or kicks off
{Phone}	Your direct line or the line they'll be calling
{Email}	The email address for replies
{SignOff}	Your closing line (e.g., "Committed to your better business and better life")

The letter that lands first.

Send first. Mail Monday or Tuesday so it lands mid-week when mailboxes are quieter.

Hey {FirstName},

{YourName} here from {BusinessName}, and I trust you're doing well.

The purpose of this letter is to invite you back so we can start working with you again.

We miss having you as a client, and so I created a shameless bribe to get you back in the door.

Here it is.

Come try my {OfferName} for {DiscountPercent} off.

This program is designed to {OfferOutcome} and includes {OfferIncludes}.

Now regularly this runs {RegularPrice}, but since I promised to bribe you I'm going to give you the {OfferName} for just {ReactivationPrice}.

— THE CATCH —

There is one small catch. No, you don't have to start at weird times of the day or pay any hidden fees on top of the {ReactivationPrice} I mentioned, but you do need to call me to claim your spot by {ResponseDeadline}.

Fair enough?

You can reach me at {Phone} or shoot me an email at {Email} to guarantee your spot in the {OfferName} starting {ProgramStartDate}.

I'm guessing you miss the results we used to get together as much as we miss working with you. Take this opportunity to do something for yourself, it's really a good deal.

Again, just call me at {Phone} or reply to this email before {ResponseDeadline} to guarantee your spot.

Really looking forward to helping you again.

{SignOff},

{YourName}

The follow-up four days later.

Send 4 days after the letter goes in the mail.

SUBJECT Re: Your {OfferName} (action required)

Hey {FirstName},

I hope this email finds you well.

A few days ago I mailed you a letter, I hope you received it. The purpose of the letter was to invite you back to {BusinessName} so we can start working with you again.

We miss having you as a client, and so I created a shameless bribe to get you back in the door.

Here it is.

Come try my {OfferName} for {DiscountPercent} off.

This program is designed to {OfferOutcome} and includes {OfferIncludes}.

Now regularly this runs {RegularPrice}, but since I promised to bribe you I'm going to give you the {OfferName} for just {ReactivationPrice}.

— THE CATCH —

There is one small catch. No, you don't have to start at weird times of the day or pay any hidden fees on top of the {ReactivationPrice} I mentioned, but you do need to call me to claim your spot by {ResponseDeadline}.

Fair enough?

You can reach me at {Phone} or just reply to this email to guarantee your spot in the {OfferName} starting {ProgramStartDate}.

I'm guessing you miss the results we used to get together as much as we miss working with you. Take this opportunity to do something for yourself, it's really a good deal.

Again, just call me at {Phone} or reply to this email before {ResponseDeadline} to guarantee your spot.

Really looking forward to helping you again.

{SignOff},
{YourName}

The call where the conversions actually happen.

Make the call the day after the email goes out. The goal of this call is to get a verbal commitment, not a hard close. A commitment means they've raised their hand. Logistics and payment can be handled in a follow-up text or email.

OPENING (WHEN THEY PICK UP)

Hey {FirstName}, it's {YourName} from {BusinessName}, do you have a quick minute?

If yes, continue. If no, ask when's a better time and lock the callback.

REASON FOR THE CALL

The reason I'm calling is I sent you a letter and an email about the {OfferName} we're running, and I wanted to reach out personally because we'd love to have you back working with us. How have you been?

Let them talk. Listen for what's been going on in their life since they stopped working with you. This is where you build the bridge back.

THE OFFER (AFTER THEY SHARE)

Yeah, that makes total sense, and that's actually why I wanted to reach out. We're running our {OfferName} starting {ProgramStartDate}, and because you've been with us before I'm giving past clients {DiscountPercent} off, so it's {ReactivationPrice} instead of {RegularPrice}. It includes {OfferIncludes}, and the whole thing is built to help you {OfferOutcome}. I think it would be a great fit for where you're at right now.

THE COMMITMENT ASK

The deadline to claim a spot is {ResponseDeadline}, and I have a few left. Does this sound like something you'd want to jump back into?

If yes:

Awesome, I'll text you a link right after we hang up so you can lock in your spot. Sound good?

If "let me think about it":

Totally fair. What's the one thing you'd want to think through? I'd rather just answer it now than have you sit on it.

If no:

No worries at all, {FirstName}, I appreciate you taking the call. If anything changes between now and {ResponseDeadline}, just shoot me a text. And if there's someone you know who'd be a good fit, I'd love to take care of them too.

TRACKING

Build this sheet before you start.

FIELD	NOTES
Client name
Last active date
Letter sent date
Email sent date
Phone call date and outcome	Reached / Voicemail / Wrong number
Commitment status	Yes / Thinking / No
Payment status	Pending / Paid
Start date confirmed
Notes from the call	What's going on in their life, why they stopped, what they're focused on now

What goes in the {OfferName} slot for your business.

The structure works for any service business, the variable is just what you put in the offer slot. Pick something with a real start date and a real deadline, because that's what turns "I should get back into this" into "I need to call them this week."

Home stagers

A discounted "first room re-stage" or a flat-rate consultation that includes a walk-through report and a 30-day plan.

Coaches and consultants

A 90-day intensive at a reactivation rate, or a one-day VIP strategy session.

Salons and personal services

A multi-visit package at a reactivation price with a clear before-and-after milestone.

Agencies

A fixed-scope sprint (audit, repositioning, campaign rebuild) with a defined start and end date.

Fitness, wellness, and studios

A challenge or transformation program tied to a specific start date.

Trades and home services

A seasonal tune-up or maintenance package at a returning-customer rate.

Before the campaign goes live.

- ☐ Past client list pulled with mailing address, email, and phone
- ☐ {OfferName} chosen with a clear start date
- ☐ {ResponseDeadline} set 14 to 21 days from mail drop
- ☐ All three pieces (letter, email, phone script) personalized with placeholders filled in
- ☐ Tracking sheet built and shared with whoever's making the calls
- ☐ Confirmation message or payment link ready to send to anyone who commits
- ☐ Calendar blocked for phone calls the day after the email goes out